

THE UNIVERSITY OF TENNESSEE AT MARTIN

Department of History and Philosophy

The study of history encourages students to develop an understanding of the human condition and places high value on educated decision-making. In addition, history majors discover the interdisciplinary nature of knowledge, the importance of tolerance, multicultural awareness, and global understanding while, at the same time, clarifying their own values.

Come Visit Us...

We invite you and your parents to visit the campus and tour our facilities with a department faculty member.

Courses in history form the heart of a liberal arts education and are taken by the majority of UT Martin students both to meet general education requirements and as electives that fulfill both professional and personal interests. The history curriculum offers much more than lessons about the past. It also fosters excellent writing and speaking skills, critical thinking, debating, problem solving, and leadership experience. A major in history prepares you for success in a variety of careers and for success in life. Our faculty is committed to mentoring students and to advancing the discipline through a full range of scholarly activities and service to the campus, the community, and the historical profession.

Studying the past, shaping the future!
