At last week's meeting, Ray Witmer, Associate Professor of Engineering at UTM, demonstrated how to teach scientific principles using simple and inexpensive (less than $25.00) equipment. Here Ray introduces the notion of levers and equilibrium using items purchased at local hardware stores and Wal-Mart. Previously he had used the same materials to discuss the amount of weight a load-carrying beam could bear. Dr. Witmer works with the STEM Center and local teachers to promote science in the schools.

Pancake Day Pictures:

Flippin' out. Griddle masters Keith and Frances sport the new aprons as they demonstrate their pancake frying prowess.

Batter up! Lindsey Holley, Cafeteria Manager at Martin Elementary School, serves up more pancake batter.
